The only experience that might have ended disastrously was one day when they were caught out at the rock reef by a sudden squall.

Mr. Baker headed into the wind with an idling engine for two hours while Mr. Miller bailed constantly to keep afloat. They were able to make the run home in safety when the squall died down.

Mr. and Mrs. Baker are enthusiastic over their vacation.

Rotary Governor—

one of the organizations of the community: filling by each club of every classification available in the community; development of members by means of fellowship, activities and Rotary education, the speaker said.

The district Governor will meet with members of the Belle Glade club at the regular weekly meeting a week from today.

NEW JAIL OPENED

On your next visit to Jacksonville when you run out of rights to see you might drop by and inspect the new jail. An associated Press dispatch tells of it being "modernized." County commissioners have so proud of the $115,000 WPA project that they ordered it opened for one day's inspection by the public.

KIRK BACK AT H. & H.
Ralph Kirk, who has been manager of the B. & H. Store in Belle Glade for some time, resigned his position last Saturday night and is back with the H. & H. Store where he formerly was employed.

Ralph is a genial chap and knows his groceries. He extends a cordial invitation to many friends to visit him in his new location.

PWA Assistance Is Given For Sport, Recreational Facilities

During the past four years the Public Works Administration has fostered the construction of the development of America's recreational physical facilities. Physical education, athletics and sports, long recognized as a vital part of America's national life, have received impetus in every State in the Union with the exception of Wyoming.

Throughout the county applicants for PWA assistance have emphasized that recreational and sport facilities were essential to the social welfare of their communities.

As a result, the Public Works Administration made 1,960 allotments for this purpose. In doing so it acted in accordance with its established policy of creating labor, not only at the site of construction but also in the factories, mines, forests and on railroads, by allotting the minor portion of the costs for financially sound and socially desirable projects. In each case the applicant furnished the major portion of the cost.

The extent to which the Public Works Administration has provided for these activities is not measurable in actual dollars inasmuch as practically all school construction projects included facilities for physical education and athletics which were not integral parts of their curricula. For example, the buildings erected at Miami Beach have a gymnasium for the use of the high school and junior high school. The entire project cost $700,000. The need for these school buildings is best shown by the advance in enrollment from 1,697 in 1920 to 2,282 in 1937.

Many other localities, due to the growth of the "town hall" spirit, built their schools to serve as community gathering places. The grand total estimated construction cost of the 1,958 projects of this nature only exceeds $75,000,000.

Allotments to 201 schools and colleges for the construction of gymnasiums, stadiums, athletic fields, swimming pools, and the like made possible construction estimated to cost $16,085,000. The other types of projects in this group were scattered, although 19 states received aid in building stadiums in most cases in public parks which were already in use.

$249,000 was allotted for the construction of the "Orange Bowl" stadium at Miami. This stadium will seat about 25,000 people.

Three-fourths of the States were quick to take advantage of the possibilities of obtaining funds from the Public Works Administration to construct these much needed municipal recreational facilities.

Swimming pools were the most widely distributed of these municipal projects. Most of the applicants in this group constructed at least one pool. Construction has recently been begun on a water distribution system to be used in connection with a swimming pool in a park at Stuart. The cost of this project will be $10,740.

Yacht harbors formed only a small portion of this group, although at Miami harbor improvements and yacht facilities were improved at a cost of $1,456,000. Another group of allotments includes projects for which allotments were made for the construction of armories and coliseums. In Tallahassee $68,817 was spent for the construction of an armory. This armory provides not only much needed quarters for the National Guard units, but, in addition, affords the community available facilities for athletic meets, shows, and similar municipal events of a recreational nature.

FOURMYS ON VACATION.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Fourmy left Saturday for a two weeks vacation which they will spend in Louisiana with friends and relatives. They plan to visit many places of interest in the state while there. Mr. Fourmy is chemist for the United States Sugar Corporation at Azucar and will, in all probability, take a few hours during vacation to inspect cane fields in Louisiana.

RICH GRAIN HARVEST

Price of bread in the Everglades will be controlled by Western farmers again this year as in the past. Chicago grain experts predict the nation's richest grain harvest since 1929. At current prices it is estimated that the crop is big enough to bring the farmers about 14 per cent more money than last year.

Coriscan Shrimp plant is one of the tropical plants displayed by Florida in Cleveland, that attracts widespread interest.
